CURRENT PROJECTS

This is about a project to generate codes based on the prompt by the user. The prompt can be descriptive which then undergoes various cases and functions to provide the required output (code). The working of this can be interfaced by both web and command line. The code returned by the project may be accurate to the prompt which is not so well described. Transformers which works by reading each part of the string are not used to implement this. Instead a method called distancing is used to make this project. The prompt undergoes distancing which looks for a similar code model in the data set. The distanced code is then returned with alterations.
